Audalia to distribute leading HR software in Spain and Portugal

25 November 2004 -- ETWeb enables companies to better manage their human resources

Article contributed by Jose Antonio Parejo.

Audalia, MSI's accounting member firm in Spain, will distribute the ETWeb solution in Spain and Portugal through its Human Resource Consulting division. The web-based software gives managers key information that enables them to improve their organisation's productivity, employee performance, as well as identify training needs for specific positions and evaluate the performance of employees based on targeted objectives.

ETWeb helps find the right person for specific positions using its skills and performance management module. The system compares the skills needed for a position against the skills an employee already has, identifies development opportunities and then helps with the implementation of the required training.

ETWeb also supports managers to develop performance plans for their employees. It also gives them the opportunity to control the objectives for every employee and establish an objective salary method linking the variable salary with many compensation models.

ETWeb also contributes to the employee's career development by following their career plan, motivating them and helping to retain the organisation's most valuable staff.

ETWeb has been developed by ExecuTRACK Solutions, a Swiss company involved in HR software development since 1983. ETWeb has been implemented in some of the most recognisable companies in the world such as Volkswagen, The New York Times, Novartis, Audi, Siemens, BASF and Lufthansa.
